

DEAF TRIVIA #4

Sign Language is a visual language expressed through physical movements instead of spoken words. The parts of the brain active in sign language processing are very similar to those individual in spoken language. There are more than 300 different sign languages signed by over 72 million deaf people worldwide. In today's society, sign languages are more common, more widely acceptable, and increasingly recognized. They face less oppression and are being encouraged in a variety of environments and walks of life.
